

Madhuri Maram
Illustrator

MusingMetaphors

Life is a procession of metaphors making a fleeting appearance in one form or the other. These glimpses evoke certain emotions in a designer that gives birth to a palette of ideas. Every stroke, every colour represent one element from our surrounding that has made a lasting impression on us. Madhuri, who firmly believes in the power of metaphors, has been demonstrating the translation of moments into connecting and convincing designs.

01 Exploration. Created as the final piece of experimentation on doodling, the image brought out qualities like composure and control in the designer. She credits the music of Prem Joshua for driving her towards this ultimate instance of imagination translated on paper.

02 Journey to technicolour. A profound portrayal of a significant transition in the life of an artist - the transition from grey to technicolour, from stagnation to free sprint. The wondrous journey of the designer's life, style and approach has been communicated through this vibrant creation that has the elements of colour and contrast in abundance. The image speaks of optimism, migration towards positivity, uncertainty, enthusiasm and beauty.

03 May peace fill my mind. An entry for a contest. Remixed take of a Soren Bechira work, made-over with a dominating essence of peace and solace. The creation lets tranquility settle in the view through the vision. The design instills the effect of serenity by creating an image of a Japanese garden with elements like fountains, bonsai, bridges etc to bring in the calm influence ←

