● Sachin Kamath's desire to impart reality onto paper translates into life-like sketches. In the process, details – such as the lighting, skin texture, expressions and eyes, etc. – prove invaluable. His work, thus, speaks the significance of achieving finesse and precision.

01 Black Convolutions.

Various features from several photos were compiled together to achieve this piece. The effort to transit from the darker shades on the left to the lighter ones on the right materialise in the final version. While simplicities like shading of the beads make the sketch come alive, replicating the subtle skin complexion and freckles represent effort.

02 Gripping Gloss.

The glossy lipstick calls for attention in this portrait of Scarlett Johansson. Simultaneously, the face lights up through its complicated texture.

03 Chills of Gray.

Exemplifying the expression of the famous Natalie Portman, the eyes speak definitively. A first attempt at life-like sketching ←
