PUBLIC NOTICE

Warning against fraudulent social media claims relating to CLAT 2027

The Consortium of National Law Universities has received reports of Telegram posts and other social media communications, circulated by unidentified or pseudonymous accounts, claiming to offer the question paper for the forthcoming Common Law Admission Test (CLAT) 2027, scheduled to be held on 6 December 2026, in exchange for payment. Certain such posts reportedly include sample questions purportedly drawn from the examination.

The Consortium cautions all CLAT aspirants, parents and members of the public that:

1. Claims of third party access to the forthcoming CLAT 2027 question paper are false, and should be treated as fraudulent. There is no basis for any person to claim that they are in a position to sell, distribute or promise advance access to the question paper.
2. Members of the public should not make any payment, share personal or financial information, or engage with persons making such offers. The circulation of purported sample questions does not establish the authenticity of the claims.
3. In any event, any attempt to access or disseminate the actual question paper of the CLAT 2027 examination will be liable to attract action under applicable law, including the Public Examinations (Prevention of Unfair Means) Amendment Act, 2026, notified on 31 July 2026, as well as any other applicable legal provisions. The appropriate authorities will determine the legal consequences in each case.
4. Aspirants and parents are advised to rely only on official communications published by the Consortium and to remain vigilant against attempts to deceive candidates or undermine public confidence in the integrity of the CLAT examination.

Reporting of evidence

Any screenshots, URLs, account details, payment requests or other relevant material relating to such posts may be shared with the Consortium Secretariat at clat@consortiumofnlus.ac.in

The Consortium is monitoring such communications and will place relevant material before the appropriate law-enforcement agencies for examination and such further action as may be warranted in accordance with law. Persons reporting such material are requested, where possible, to preserve the original post, URL, date/time and related communications, and not to circulate such claims further.

Issued in the interest of CLAT aspirants and the public at large.
